

Cash Management

Cash is still the lifeblood of many businesses. Over half of retail transactions use cash, and the matter of how best to manage it is one of the core concerns for an efficient business. Small discrepancies closer to the customer end of a business's cashflow can compound into substantial confusion and headaches in accounting, introducing unnecessary noise to reports and metrics.

The bigger problem for most businesses is often the problem that persists even when no others arise: manual cash management strategies are incredibly inefficient. The extent of this inefficiency is highlighted by the fact that our International cash management solutions offer a reduction in cash handling costs of up to 60%.

substantial part of the cost of cash management takes the form of fees to cash collection services and banks, and while Gunnebo can help develop solutions to reduce these fees, we've identified that up to 80% of the cost of cash management arises from staff activity and resources.

Using automated cash management services and devices can dramatically reduce overall spend while greatly enhancing cash management security. Our cash recyclers are an optimal way of handling large volumes of notes and coins for the purposes of till balancing; dispensing predetermined or freely selected volumes and denominations, and automatically sorting, authenticating and stacking deposited notes in recycling cassettes within a certified safe.

Our cash management software allows you to monitor and control your cash handling process remotely, letting you track levels of cash by denominations in real time for each and every machine across an entire estate. Centrally stored cash management data not only provides invaluable information but allows you to share that data in real time with external partners such as Cash-in-Transit (CIT), service technicians and banking services. System monitoring services also ensure that every device is operating properly and any problems are immediately resolved for minimum impact on your business.
